

MARION COHEN
HISTORIAN | ETHNOGRAPHER

"I speak for those who had no voice; those enslaved, persecuted, treated as second class citizens. More so, I speak for those whose voices are forgotten and lost to history"

MarionHistorian.com

Marion R. Cohen (Dobbins) has spent years in the field of Education, Management, Research, Analysis, and Public History/ Speaking. She currently holds the position of Campus Executive Director for the Aviation Institute of Maintenance, in Manassas Virginia, where she oversees 200 students and 35 instructors and staff members.

Her work history includes assignments for Congressman Gerald Connolly, Monticello Historical site, Mount Vernon and served as Practice Manager for many medical facilities in the area. In 2009 she was admitted to the University of Virginia and received her undergraduate degree in humanities; graduating with Highest Distinction.

Marion has provided insight into Virginia and African American historical narratives to schools, universities, civic organizations, private societies, conferences, and museums. She is a regular interpreter at Monticello and venues in and around Prince William County-Manassas Battlefield. She is the President of the Fairfax County African American Historical Society. She received her Masters from George Mason University and is enrolled as a doctoral student at George Mason University.

Marion Cohen is a historian and ethnographer based in the Metropolitan Washington DC area, specializing in Research and Public Speaking, Historical Sessions and Ethnography.